"We move/change something!"

Active mobility of young people in urban areas: using participatory processes and intersectoral dialogue to make the urban environment movement-friendly

Project Cornerstones

- Running from December 2018 to December 2020
- Implemented in 3 member cities in cooperation with one of their youth centres
 - Klagenfurt: Mädchenzentrum Klagenfurt
 - Villach: ju:Z – Jugendzentrum Villach
 - Wörgl: ZONE Wörgl – komm!unity

Main questions

- What ideas / requests / concerns are important to young people concerning “Active Mobility”?
- How can ideas from young people to improve their mobility become integrated into the decision-making of a city?
- How can participatory processes become better implemented on city level?

What is wanted for more active mobility?

- A more colourful city
- Attractive space for cycling and walking
- Attractive public space through consumption-free common spaces and WIFI
- Open spaces for leisure activities
- More nature in the city
- Attracitvity of public transport,
- If possible short walking and cycling distances

Facilitating communication processes between youth and city representatives

Sustainability?

- There are many issues still in discussion in the participating cities (e.g. road safety, feeling safe at night in dim places, improving public transport ...)
- Evaluation shows that city representatives are happy to learn more about the needs of young people
- Youth centres and city representatives have learned to communicate (meaning understanding communication needs of each other better)
- Project outcomes are further discussed and transported (Healthy cities network, Cities Association, Network of open youth work ...)

Guidelines for future projects

- Think and act intersectoral - early involvement of stakeholders
- Decision process often needs time and repeated communication
- Facilitate direct communication, if wanted
- Define milestones and communicate, communicate
- Consider equity – not only the loud should be heared
